Six-Point Farm Plan Drafted for Congress

PROCESSING TAX TO BE REVIVED TO DEFRAY COST

Committee Headed By Jones Of Texas Studying Needed Statute

LOANS ARE ADVISED

New Revenues Necessary After F. D. Acts

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27—(UP)—The house agricultural committee met today to begin the drafting of farm legislative program for the special session of congress. The program was expected to include commodity surplus control and price stabilization provisions. Chairman Marvin Jones, D., Tex., of the committee, outlined a six-point program, which he thought should be included in the bill. He was confident that it would fall within limits specified by President Roosevelt last week.

Senate Busy, Too
The senate agriculture committee, getting first hand testimony on farm conditions from the "grass roots" during the recess period, also is expected to hasten its drafting work.

- Jones' program was:
1. Revival of processing taxes to defray costs of the program, which may cost from $500,000,000 to $1,000,000,000 annually.
 2. A permanent soil conservation program. The present $500,000,000 a year plan expires in 1942.
 3. An ever-normal-granary for storing crop surpluses for lean years.
 4. Commodity loans to farmers (Continued on Page Eight)

Safe Driving Made Compulsory Study in Racine

Racine junior police members make complaints

Offenders in junior traffic court

RACINE, WIS., is the first city in the United States to make safe driving a compulsory subject of study for junior and senior high school pupils. It thus hopes to set an example for the nation. Road rules, regulations, courtesies and methods of safe driving are taught. An added inducement is the formation of the Racine junior police, members of which are equipped with stars and who assist senior officers in regulating traffic. Duties of junior police deal particularly with children. There is also a bicycle court in which "cases" against youthful violators of bicycle ordinances are "tried".

Methodist Men Choose E. C. Rector As President

Edward C. Rector, of Williamsport, a leader in the Mt. Pleasant brotherhood, was elected, Tuesday evening, as the first president of the Pickaway County Methodist Brotherhood. Other officers chosen were Homer V. Reber, Ashville, vice president, and H. W. Plum, Circleville, secretary and treasurer. A temporary executive committee includes the Revs. H. A. Sayre, D. H. Householder, Williamsport; E. F. Schlegel, Ashville; Earl Kettelman, Tarlton; Webber C. French, New Holland, and Ralph Francis, Commercial Point.

The county-wide meeting of Methodist men was held in the Circleville church with supper served at 6:30 o'clock by ladies of the church. All members of the Methodist Ministerial association and more than 100 men, representing all Methodist congregations of the county, were present.

They heard an address by the Rev. C. E. Turley, superintendent of the Wilmington M. E. district, on "How Much is a Man Worth?" L. V. Runyan, superintendent of the Sabina school and vice president of the Clinton county Men's Brotherhood, outlined the program and activity of the organization.

The committee that nominated the officers included Meeker Terwilliger, John H. Dunlap and Harold Costlow. The executive committee will meet with the officers to outline policies and perfect a permanent organization for presentation at the next meeting to be held Dec. 1 at the Ashville M. E. church.

ST. JEAN DE LUZ, France, Oct. 27—(UP)—Unconfirmed frontier reports said today that a section of the Madrid population revolted last night and that fighting was going on in the streets.

Fighting broke out, the reports said, when the populace finally learned of the fall of Gijon and the removal of the government from Valencia to Barcelona.

It was reported that small groups of Nationalists filtered into Madrid to ascertain the exact nature of the alleged disorders before ordering a general attack.

LONDON, Oct. 27—(UP)—The Spanish embassy denounced rumors of a revolt in Madrid, characterizing them as "wild Fascist dreams and hopes to which we do not attach the slightest credence."

The embassy had not been in telephonic communication with Madrid at the time of the spokesman's statement.

LONDON, Oct. 27—(UP)—The Spanish press agency reported from Gibraltar today that 1,000 Moorish troops and 300 Italians had disembarked at Algeciras from the German battleship Deutschland.

The agency asserted that the landing of war materials at Cadiz continued. Two Italian hospital ships were said to be at Cadiz.

COUNCIL FAVORS WIG-WAGS FOR N. & W. TRACKS

Utility to Maintain its Gates At Court Street, Watchmen at Main

OFFICIALS VOTE 4 TO 2

Freight Agent Declares Move Aids Safety

Installation of wig-wag signals on the Norfolk & Western railroad crossings in Circleville was approved by council Tuesday night by a vote of four to two. Two weeks ago council voted down the proposed changes three to three.

Wig-wag signals will be placed at all crossings with the exception of those at Main street—Western avenue and S. Court street. Gates will be maintained at the Court street crossing.

The company will place three watchmen on eight-hour shifts at the Main street crossing gates so the men now working as watchmen at other crossings will be able to maintain their positions. When a watchman dies or is placed on pension a wig-wag will be installed and operated during that shift. Eventually only the wig-wags would be used at the Main street crossing.

Councilman Frank Marion urged other members to reconsider the changes in crossing protection. A. V. Osborn, freight agent for the railroad, told councilmen he believed the wig-wag signals with flashing red lights were greater protection than the gates now used. He said company records showed 132 auto drivers went through lowered gates during 1936. The change in crossing protection has been approved by the utilities commission.

Councilmen Ben Gordon and Harry Steinhauser voted against the changes. At the previous meeting T. M. Barnes had opposed the changes. He was absent Tuesday night. Julius Helweg, absent from the previous meeting, approved the changes. A resolution was adopted.

EX-KING PLEDGES SELF TO SERVICE IN FIRST SPEECH

PARIS, Oct. 27—(UP)—The Duke of Windsor told the Anglo-American Press club today that he had no intention of leading an idle life and hoped to make some contribution towards solving the world's present grave problems.

It was the duke's first formal speech on his personal affairs since the abdication radio address in which he proclaimed he was giving up the throne "for the woman I love."

"We are looking forward to our tour of the United States to study methods of housing and industrial conditions," he told the Press club.

"My wife and I neither are content nor willing to lead an inactive life of leisure. We hope the experience will allow us to make some contribution towards solving some of the vital problems besetting the world today."

FAILURE TO PROVIDE FOR FAMILY LEADS TO PRISON
Pearl Bush, Island road, was taken to the Cincinnati workhouse Wednesday by Sheriff Charles Radcliff to serve a three-month sentence and a fine of $100 and costs imposed by Judge C. C. Young on a charge of failure to provide for his children. Bush, the judge said, was placed on probation on his promise to support the children. He was arrested for violation of the terms of the probation.

MONTAGUE, FREED, TO CAPITALIZE ON HIS GOLFING FAME

Contract Signed With Crosby's Brother To Net Million

ELIZABETHTOWN, N. Y., Oct. 27—(UP)—John Montague stepped from the jeopardy of a criminal trial today into a contract that guarantees him a million dollars in seven years for displaying his talents as a golfer.

Soon after the Paul Bunyan golfer was acquitted on a seven year old robbery charge in Essex county court last night, the United Press learned in Hollywood that he already had signed a contract with Everett Crosby, older brother of his intimate friend, Bing Crosby, which assures him a fortune.

The contract covers Montague's services in every possible endeavor — as a golf player, movie actor, radio speaker, writer. If his earnings net a million dollars plus Crosby's managerial fees in less than seven years, he'll get his million that much sooner.

Montague had hardly been carried out of the courtroom on the shoulders of cheering admirers, when he was intimating to newspapermen that he would begin capitalizing on his fame at once, now that the old robbery charge, which made him a reticent, timid and almost legendary figure for years, no longer hung over his head. He would make no positive statement of his plans.

Employment Offered

It was evident that the man whose feats on the golf links have caused competent sports critics to call him one of the greatest players of all time, would not be idle from lack of opportunity. Telegrams of congratulation were pouring in on him immediately after the verdict, and among them were offers of all sorts of employment, mostly to exhibit his golfing skill in one way or another, at fabulous fees.

In Hollywood, movie executives were considering offering him contracts, mainly to make golfing shorts. It was considered certain that radio advertising sponsors and book magazine publishers would make immediate and equally lucrative offers.

Under his contract, all these opportunities will be acted on by Crosby. The contract was effective the moment a not guilty verdict was rendered, and that moment came shortly before midnight last night when a gray-haired man stood up in the jury box in the country courtroom and pronounced the words that freed Montague of the charge that severed his partnership with Crosby. FIRE IN ALASKA COAL MINE KILLS 14; FIVE ESCAPE

ANCHORAGE, Alaska, Oct. 27—(UP)—Fourteen men were reported killed in an explosion that set fire to the Evans-Jones coal mine at Jonesville, 70 miles north of here, last night.

Z. J. Loussac, vice president of the company, returned here from the mine and reported that the bodies of six men were recovered and there was no hope for eight other men trapped in the workings.

Five miners escaped after the blast, he said.

Loussac reported that the six bodies recovered were so badly mangled and burned that he doubted if they would be identified.

He said that the fire was extinguished late last night but that the mine suffered heavy damage. The cause of the explosion was not learned.

First reports of the accident came from Harry Drake, mine foreman who telephoned here asking that nurses, physicians, and medical supplies be sent to the mine.

A rescue crew went to the mine in two gasoline-powered railway cars.

The mine, producing soft coal, sells its product to the Alaska railroad.

PARLEY BID REJECTED

Brussels Confab Termed "Like League"

TOKYO, Oct. 27—(UP)—Japan today rejected Belgium's invitation to attend the nine-power conference at Brussels Nov. 3 to discuss the Far Eastern crisis.

The rejection was not unexpected. The leading Minsetto and Selyukal parties, as well as other political groups in the lower house, had agreed that a "polite rejection" of the invitation was "preferable."

The Japanese reply saw in the Belgian invitation "some connection with the League of Nations, which already has given moral support to China."

SHANGHAI, Oct. 27—(UP)—Japanese troops fought their way into the city of Shanghai today and the streets of China's commercial capital were becoming a battlefield.

It was a sickening battlefield, a nightmare of hell, and the threat of a catastrophe that would horrify the world lay over the entire city.

Just across the Szechow creek from the United States marine sector of the international settlement defense line Japanese shock troops coldly bayoneted the stolid Chinese rear guards who had elected to remain and die so that their main army could retreat in orderly manner to the new Chiang Kai-Shek defense line west of the city.

At the marine and British infantry barricades frenzied men, women and children civilians, and pain-maddened Chinese soldiers, fought for admission to the comparative safety of the international settlement.

Fugitives Admitted

The marines and the British infantrymen flanking them on their left, tried their hardest to keep the refugees in line. They admitted civilians and wounded Chinese soldiers or those who, unwounded, took off their uniforms.

But the crowds were frenzied. They were blocked immovably in a road on the British lines, and it was necessary for the Royal Ulster rifles, backed by police, to make a sortie and beat them back with rifle butts and clubs. Women and children were trampled, screaming, under the feet of men, (Continued on Page Eight)

DAVEY TO DEMAND NEW POOR RELIEF BILL BE WRITTEN

COLUMBUS, Oct. 27—(UP)—The $12,000,000 poor relief program for 1938, drafted by the joint relief committee for consideration at a special session of the Ohio legislature, received a setback today when Gov. Martin L. Davey announced he will insist upon local governments supplying half the money to meet their relief needs.

The governor said he had not studied the committee's program but that he still believed any program should provide for 50-50 matching of state funds and should include legislation to permit subdivisions to levy local taxes for this purpose.

The committee's program does not provide for direct matching.

DAIRY PLANT EXPLOSION KILLS MARYSVILLE YOUTH

G.O.P. Told Hoover Not Seeking Job

Former President Moves Toward Leadership of National Committee

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27—(UP)—Former President Herbert C. Hoover scratched his name from the 1940 G. O. P. presidential sweepstakes today, but moved forward in his campaign for dominance of the Republican national committee.

Mr. Hoover's immediate objective is committee approval next week of a 1938 Republican national convention to prepare the party for congressional elections and cast a forward looking declaration of policy.

He re-affirmed that plan last night in a radio broadcast. Mr. Hoover endorsed a suggestion that a committee of distinguished Republican men and women draft a program for submission to the mid-term convention.

The mid-term convention plan is leading Mr. Hoover toward a showdown with former Gov. Alf M. Landon for influence within the committee which will meet in Chicago Nov. 5-6 to decide whether the convention shall be summoned.

"I do not want any public office," Mr. Hoover told the Massachusetts state Republican club last night in Boston. He said it was up to the Republican party to provide the "moral and intellectual" leadership which would make possible a coalition of anti-New Deal Democrats and independents with the G.O.P. in a general offensive against the Roosevelt administration.

THREE KILLED, 29 INJURED IN RAILROAD CRASH

Wabash Passenger Hits Rear End of Stalled Freight Train

R. R. EMPLOYEES VICTIMS

Flames Halt Rescuers; Passengers Jarred

DANVILLE, Ill., Oct. 27.—(UP)—Fire defied efforts of rescuers to remove bodies today from the wreckage of a Wabash line train wreck in which three persons were killed and 29 injured. Bodies of the engineer and fireman of a passenger train which smashed into the rear end of a stalled freight train near Catlin were believed still in the wreckage. Rescuers were forced back by flames which consumed six box cars, three mail cars, an express car and a passenger coach. All the dead and injured were in the passenger train which had been speeding from St. Louis to Detroit.

The dead: Harry Draper, Decatur, Ill., engineer. Harry Poe, Decatur, fireman. B. S. Maggett, Butler, Ind., mail clerk.

Only nine of the injured required hospital treatment. They were: Mrs. Fred C. Breitt, St. Louis, passenger. Henry Penny, Jr., St. Louis, cook.

Frank Pines, St. Louis, cook. James Walton, Peru, Ind., mail clerk.

Claude Wade, Silver Lake, Ind., mail clerk. Wilbur Bower, Fort Wayne, Ind., mail clerk.

D. W. Shaw, Fort Wayne, mail clerk. Glenn Richards, Wabash, Ind., mail clerk.

Fred C. Warren, Toledo, O., express messenger. Two Men Serious

Bower and Wade were believed the only ones in serious condition. Twenty other passengers received scratches and bruises.

Railroad employees said the freight train customarily traveled 10 minutes ahead of the passenger train. Last night, it was believed, the passenger train was several minutes ahead of schedule.

Frank Jordan, engineer of the freight train, said an air hose broke one mile west of Catlin. He stopped the train for repairs. A conductor ran back to flag the passenger train if necessary.

A farmer who saw the wreck said the passenger train was within 100 feet of the freight train before brakes were applied.

The passenger train burst through six of the box cars at the rear of the freight train.

The passenger train locomotive and tender, the express car, three mail cars and one of the passenger coaches bounced off the rails and toppled into a ditch.

Almost all of nearly 70 passengers on the train were in steel coaches to the rear of the derailed car, and received nothing more than severe jarring.

Star's Brother Named In Extortion Attempt

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 27.—(UP)—Capt. Sydney McLaglen, 48, brother of the movie actor Victor McLaglen, was held for investigation today for allegedly attempting to obtain $20,000 from Phillip Chancellor a wealthy watch maker.

Capt. McLaglen and his actor brother were estranged several months ago.

He was held in the county jail incommunicado. He refused to make a statement and demanded to talk to the British consul immediately. He is a British subject, he said.

Capt. McLaglen, who is tall and husky like his brother who plays the "hard-boiled" movie roles, was arrested last night after two officers listened at a dictograph to his conversation with Chancellor's secretary.

Hollywood police said Chancellor complained two months ago that McLaglen demanded $20,000 of him.

Capt. William Penprase of the sheriff's office said Chancellor told him that McLaglen threatened to reveal information that was damaging to the manufacturer.

Money Refused Chancellor said McLaglen claimed that the information indicated "treason against the United States." But actually, Chancellor said, it turned out to be merely anti-semitic propaganda and so he refused to pay the money.

The information given to police was that Chancellor had been writing a book. McLaglen gave him information for it. Chancellor failed to pay for the information, it was alleged, and McLaglen then threatened to "expose" him.

Last night Deputy Sheriffs Arthur Weth and A. F. Thomas, and Edwin E. Crumpler, private detective, hid at the studio of Stanley Glinn, Chancellor's secretary. They listened over a dictograph, they said, while McLaglen allegedly sought the secretary's co-operation in his plan, and was refused.

McLaglen was taken into custody as he left the studio. He was booked at the jail in Glendale, he was transferred to the county jail.

Victor McLaglen is traveling abroad and had not been notified today of the arrest. The two brothers' estrangement resulted in a bitter episode in court. Sydney sued Victor for $90,000, charging that his brother prevented him from obtaining work in the movies. Sydney lost the case.

114 WORKING IN STATE

Guide Being Prepared to Ohio's History

Appointment of Prof. Harlan Hatcher of Ohio State university, author of "Tunnel Hill," "Patterns of Wolfpen" and "Central Standard Time," as state director of the Federal Writers' Project in Ohio, was announced today by Dr. Carl Watson, state WPA administrator.

Professor Hatcher will continue to teach two classes in the English department of the University.

He succeeds James G. Dunton of Circleville, who has resigned. Professor Hatcher is a native of Ironton, is 39 years old, is married and lives at 102 Kenworth Road, Columbus. He was graduated from Ohio State university in 1922, obtained his master's degree in 1923, has been on the English department faculty there since 1922. He is a World War veteran, a member of the Faculty, Crichton, Optimist and Players clubs.

Besides his novels he has written "The Versification of Robert Browning," "Creating the Modern American Novel" and numerous magazine articles and short stories.

50 Work in Columbus

State headquarters of the Federal Writers' Project is located at 337 South High street. Fifty of the 114 workers employed on this project over the state are working at the state headquarters.

Projects in other cities employ workers as follows: Toledo, 10; Cincinnati, 19; Athens, 10; Cleveland, 12; Akron, 13.

As head of the Federal Writers' Project in Ohio, Professor Hatcher will have final direction of the preparation of "The Ohio Guide," a comprehensive volume of about 600 pages scheduled to be published in the spring.

Like all other WPA projects, "The Ohio Guide" was undertaken to give useful jobs and wages to unemployed workers. The volume

The Ohio book will be included in the national publication of the Writer's Project to be called "The American Guide." State guides have already been published in Vermont, Massachusetts and Idaho. The guide to Washington, D. C. has been published and has drawn many favorable press notices.

As byproducts of "The Ohio Guide," the Federal Writers' Project contemplates publishing, under appropriate local sponsorship, various county guides.

Ohio Rich in Material

"I have followed the work of the Federal Writers' Project in Ohio and in other states with keen interest and I am delighted to be able to participate in the final preparation of "The Ohio Guide," Professor Hatcher said following his appointment. "Ohio is particularly rich in material for both the historian and the tourist. Historians, scholars, research workers, novelists as well as plain citizens will find the Ohio Guide invaluable in acquainting themselves with the resources of the state."

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA

An adventure mystery that races excitingly from the drop of the first clue through a series of situations alternately romantic, funny dangerous and sinister piles up plenty of thrills for "Bulldog Drummond Comes Back," Paramount's second dramatization of the famous "Sapper" McNeill detective character, which opens tonight on a double bill with Jessie Matthews in "Gangway" at the Cliftona theatre.

This picture, which is based on McNeill's original story entitled "The Female of the Species" and closely parallels the detective story's plot, introduces a new riddle-and-rhyme pattern that is guaranteed to shake anyone's skeleton free of cobwebs. It also brings you John Barrymore in the role of Colonel Nielson, police inspector from Scotland Yard, in a slew of disguises that will completely baffle and befuddle the most inveterate John Barrymore fans.

M'CRADY TO HAVE PRIVATE OFFICE IN CITY BUILDING

Police Chief William McCrady will have a private office in the city building.

Council assigned the room formerly used by the board of elections to the police chief Tuesday night. The suggestion that the room be assigned to Mr. McCrady was made by Councilman Harry Steinhauser.

Mr. Steinhauser presented an ordinance seeking an appropriation of funds for purchasing a motorcycle for the department. The ordinance was read and the councilman asked the rules be suspended and it be passed. There was no second. The ordinance specified no certain amount.

"I'd like to amend that ordinance and buy them a bicycle," Councilman Frank Marion said. The ordinance was referred to the safety committee.

Mr. Steinhauser then recommended the police car be used more extensively for checking traffic violations in the city. He said the car was in the garage during a large part of the day and was not used for checking violators.

PROBE OF NEWSPRINT OPENS

WASHINGTON—The President's long threatened investigation of monopolies finally is under way. He started it last Wednesday with secret orders to the Justice Department to begin gathering evidence at once on price-fixing in "consumer goods".

One of the items specifically listed by the President for immediate probing is newspaper. Prices in this commodity have zoomed in recent months, although there is neither a dearth nor unusual demand for it.

Roosevelt has repeatedly announced a survey of anti-trust law violations, and in his last fireside chat he said it was actually in motion.

The statement completely baffled Justice Department authorities, who knew nothing about the inquiry. They had been twiddling their thumbs impatiently for months waiting for a go-ahead signal from the White House.

Roosevelt apparently thought he had given it, but discovered his mistake after he made the speech. In any event, when he did step on the starter he told the Justice Department not to spare the gas.

"CORDIAL RELATIONS"

HUMAN psychology is always a curious thing, and just how the Japanese psychology seems, to Americans, more curious than usual.

A Japanese engineer, explaining his country's attitude in the Asiatic war, repeats what has been said by almost every Japanese spokesman, official or unofficial, who has discussed the matter.

"Japan has no desire other than to shake hands with North China," he says. "But as the Chinese government is unfriendly and has Bolshevik leanings, my country has been forced to take military action to bring about more cordial relations."

Perhaps we have misunderstood the Japanese when we called them "realists." Surely there can be nothing less realistic, or more idealistic and imaginative, than to believe that any nation can establish "cordial relations" with another by making war against it—especially such warfare as Japan is waging against the Chinese people.

Oriental, perhaps, are more philosophic and slower to wrath than occidentals. But it may take a century, no matter how this war ends, for the Chinese to outgrow the bitter resentment aroused by such a murderous effort to win their friendship.

NO JAPANESE

The Navy Department received a radio message from the Far East the other day, telling of an international encounter not reported in the war dispatches. It involved not Chinese and Japanese, but British, French, Italians, and U. S. Marines.

There was a joker in it. Here is the text:

INTERNATIONAL TRACK MEET PEIPING FIRST THREE DAYS SCORES US MARINES TWENTY BRITISH SEVENTEEN FRENCH THREE ITALIANS THREE JAPANESE NOT COMPETING.

The message was signed by Colonel John Marston, Commanding Officer of the Marine Detachment, Peiping.

HEALTHY 1937

A big insurance company, studying the records of 17,500,000 industrial policy holders during the first eight months of 1937, has brought out some measuring facts. First, they found the best health record ever made in any similar period by this cross section of the general population.

The death rate had dropped to the lowest point for any year through August, chiefly because of a decline in deaths from measles, homicides and tuberculosis. Maternal mortality was lower. Even the accident death rate, except for automobile mishaps, was lower in all but one month than in the corresponding months of 1936.

The deaths from traffic accidents made the only bad spot on the record. They had risen by 10 per cent over the same period a year ago.

Statistics are often rather dull, but such reassuring ones as most of these encourage everyone who is working to make a healthier and safer people.

MORGENTHAU VICTORY

There was more in the revised budget issued by the President last week than mere debit and credit figures.

Behind the announcement that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation would liquidate its commitments was a long-sought triumph by Secretary Henry Morgenthau over RFC Chairman Jesse Jones.

These two Administration big-wigs have been secret rivals since the early days of the New Deal, when both aspired to succeed the late William Woodin as Secretary of the Treasury. Young Henry was head of the Farm Credit Administration, which he had reorganized and revitalized. Jesse was an experienced financier, an RFC veteran and a potent politico.

On the surface all the chances seemed to favor Jones. But Young Henry, old friend and Dutchess County neighbor of the President, got the plum.

In the four years since then, Morgenthau has always had his fingers crossed when Jones and the RFC were concerned.

World At A Glance —By— Charles P. Stewart

New Dealerism would like to have someone explain Representative John E. Miller's recent victory over Gov. Carl E. Bailey as Arkansas Democracy's candidate for the United States senate, succeeding the late Senator Joseph T. Robinson.

Anti-New Dealerism would like to have it explained, too.

Not that either the "pros" or the "antis" had any particular preference between Bailey and Miller as personalities. Bailey, however prominent he may be in his home state, is not well known in Washington. And Miller has not been an especially conspicuous member of congress.

But Bailey campaigned as a 100 per cent New Dealer. Miller's record is partly (not absolutely) the other way.

"ANTI" A VICTOR

In effect, it was a "pro" versus an "anti" New Deal contest, with the "anti" candidate as victor.

(The Republicans do not count in Arkansas.)

Moreover, Miller won sizably and against a handicap; Bailey had the indorsement of his state committee. Such a thing hasn't occurred before, they say, since the war of secession.

Briefly, it was a corking anti-New Deal triumph.

No wonder the New Dealers want to have it accounted for, in order to ascertain what's the matter with their cause in that "neck of the woods."

Equally are the "antis" desirous to analyze it accurately, with a view to assuring themselves of more of the same elsewhere.

LOCAL?

The Arkansas result may not signify much by itself. Perhaps it was only a local manifestation.

At the same, it perturbs New Dealers.

Dixie, to be sure, has not been considered ardently pro-New Deal. Being Democratically labeled, it has found itself exceedingly unwilling to turn hostile to a Democratically-labeled administration, but the New Dealers themselves have been perfectly aware that they were not overly popular below the Mason-Dixon line. They have said among themselves, "No matter; we are gaining enough new strength in the north to offset what we are losing in the southland." Nevertheless, they do not like to forfeit southern votes.

They have hoped that they were not forfeiting many of them.

Arkansas' vote hints that they have been doing so at an alarming rate.

NEXT SPRING'S PRIMARIES

Next Spring's nominating primaries, for congressional seats will tell the New Deal's story, as to the future.

Democrats will be nominated versus Republicans, as usual.

That will not matter.

The question is: "What kind of Democrats will be nominated? New Deal Democrats, or 'antis'?"

If anti-New Deal Democrats are nominated, it will be as bad for the administration as if Republicans win in November. Almost worse.

THE TEST

The real test will come in the spring primaries.

The Democrats will win in November; that is a cinch. But what kind of Democrats? "Pro" or "anti" New Dealers?

The "anti" Democrats will join with the Republicans. Or, rather, the Republicans will join with them.

THE DIVIDING LINE

In Arkansas, for example, John E. Miller, a Republican, will take his senate seat as a Democrat.

Democrats will take their seats as Republicans.

The whole thing is all mixed up. There is a distinction, however, between New Dealerishness and anti-New Dealerishness. That is the dividing line between the two new, but, as yet, mixed-up new parties.

CHAPTER 38

TIM'S RESOLUTION to pull himself together, weak enough in conception, proved stillborn, for presently a fresh discouragement took away all heart and will to put it into effect. Looking over his books, the day after the mishap with Mrs. Gordon, he noted that two of his most regular and lucrative patients had not been to see him for some time.

One was a retired schoolmaster of the name of Lucas, the other a wealthy widow, Mrs. Bullock. Both belonged to the class of patient the conscientious dentist always holds up as a model to their less careful brethren; they took great pride in their teeth, and never failed to have them inspected at least once every six months. Tim discovered that they were both overdue; Lucas should have been along early in October, and Mrs. Bullock a few weeks later. Their visits had always been so regular as to be predictable, and this lapse was quite unprecedented.

It was only the next day that Tim met Lucas in the tobaccoist's a few doors from the surgery. The assistant was at the back, opening a new case of Lucas' special mixture, and the two exchanged a few words about the weather. Lucas was a slightly built, nervous man, with a perpetually hunted look, as if he could never quite believe he had really escaped from a world of harassing, unruly boys; and he had a habit of stammering in moments of embarrassment. He was stammering now.

"You haven't been along to see me for quite a time," said Tim, rather unprofessionally, but the thing was worrying him. "I made it out you were due over a month ago."

"Really? I m...ust have let it s-s-s...lip," Lucas' affliction was painfully evident. "I'll ph...one you in a day or two." He seized his mixture, handed over a coin, and rushed precipitately from the shop. "Your change, Mr. Lucas," called out the assistant. Lucas came back and took his money, looking a fool, then bolted out again.

"Must have something on his mind," said the assistant, who was rather a coarse young man. "Perhaps he's in love."

Tim did not reply. Quite suddenly he had realized Lucas was not coming to him any more. Mrs. Bullock was not coming to him any more. No doubt there were others. There were some people whom the merest breath of scandal was sufficient to frighten.

Esther's death, the coroner's well-intentioned, but really damaging eulogium of Tim, had shaken his reputation. He might be a murderer. It was not likely, but it was possible. And nervous people do not care to make use of the professional services of a possible murderer. . . . Especially a doctor or a dentist, who wield such formidable power over the body.

This, then, was the real explanation of Mower's change of mind. Tim saw it all. In the interval between his approach to Tim and the lunch at the William and Mary Mower had been getting some of Tim's patients. He had become aware that Tim's reputation was blown upon. No wonder he was no longer prepared to buy a partnership with a dentist whose patients were beginning to come to him, without any effort or unprofessional conduct on his own part.

The discovery left Tim without the desire and motive needed for the effort to pull himself together.

"You haven't been along to see me for quite a time."

This new misfortune was something beyond his power to check or control. The rot had set in; very well, he argued, he would do nothing to stem it. . . . It proceeded apace.

Tim had always been a very abstemious man; but now he began to drink. He found that whiskey, while at first stimulating his perceptions, eventually dulled them. Drinking did not bring him any happiness, even a fugitive one, but it produced a condition of anaesthesia.

So there was something rotten at The Wilderness. Tim drinking, Adams drinking and loafing about with nothing particular to do, the effect on the discipline of the household was not long in showing itself.

Meals were badly cooked and served late; the cook, who had been at The Wilderness for 12 years, seemed to have lost all interest. The parlormaid gave notice, left, and was not replaced. The housemaid, with no one to check her, gave up all but the most perfunctory efforts to keep the place clean, and spent most of her time larking with the boy who came in daily to take over Adam's work, or with Adams himself.

Dust lay everywhere, and a prevailing grime settled over a house which, a short while back, had been one of the cleanest, best kept, and most attractive in the neighborhood. Tim dismissed the gardener, and lost all his own interest in the garden; he took, indeed, a malicious pleasure in fostering the decay and disorder. The Wilderness Noddy would find on his return to England would be a very different place to what he had known.

Through it Tim moved listlessly, in a kind of aphasia. And now, on top of everything, Adams began to give trouble again.

Adams, as has been said, had been drinking. But it was not through drunkenness that he again began to obtrude himself on Tim's notice. The drinking itself was a symptom of something more fundamental. He was suffering from a disease not uncommon among people of no particular intellectual resource who have been in the habit of working, but have to work no longer—he had nothing to do with his time.

His five or six hours daily at the surgery had never been spent in anything more active than opening or shutting doors, a certain amount of dusting and cleaning, and some mechanical work on dentures. He still did a bit of cleaning, in the perfunctory way he felt he owed to his new condition of independence, but the work on the dentures he had soon abandoned, in the first flush of emancipation. He would not have been sorry to have it back now, but was disinclined to make by his resumption of it the tacit confession that he was at a loose end.

For the rest of the days, and during the week-ends, his situation was like that of a boy left behind at school after the holidays had begun. He simply did not know how to amuse himself. The charms of liberty lost their freshness in a very few days. Idleness, however, fed on itself, and combined with the absence of the spur of compulsion to produce a state of mind in which he shirked the effort to find himself new distractions.

Adams could now of course afford to tap sources of pleasure formerly beyond his reach, but his spirit was sluggish, and he fell back on a more intensification of his old habits. At first the Goose Quill saw him at opening time instead of half past 8; he would drink a good deal more, stand treat a good deal more, beat and throw his weight about a good deal more.

The result of these indulgences, however, was to give him a daily morning hangover, so that presently he became a less regular patron, and two or three times a week he would not go down until after supper or not at all. Then, of course, he had to fill in the time somehow; and that was where Tim came in.

DIET AND HEALTH

Effect on Heart, if Any, Of Sleeping Positions

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

SOME PEOPLE are convinced that they should sleep on the right side and some that they should sleep on the left side; a very small majority are convinced that they should sleep on the stomach, and an even smaller number that the best place for them to sleep is on the back, and they all try conscientiously to assume these positions.

Controlled observations of sleepers would indicate that the position of the body on the back, and the position of the head on the left side, are the most comfortable. There is a peculiarity among different people as to which position they find the most comfortable. In the case of the man just recited, he was comfortable when he was on his side. Some people, however, are uncomfortable on the side and comfortable on the back. A case in point is of a woman, 44 years old, with high blood pressure, who states that if she lies on the left side she feels a pressing on the apex of the heart, and that she gets "all stuffed up and can't breathe." She says that often in the middle of the night she wakes up lying on the left side with a funny, short cough, all choked up.

Another man, on the contrary, experiences the same symptoms when he is on his right side, and he goes to sleep on his left side with a pillow at his back so he would have to roll unwill in order to get on the right side.

There is no explanation that anybody can give for these particular symptoms, and the variations are probably due to variations in the nature of the heart trouble itself. They certainly have no implications as to any particularly healthful position of a person who is in good health, and the last thing that anybody would suggest is that lying in any particular position induces heart disease.

ing heavily. She finds that if she can roll him on the right side, the panting stops, whether or not she awakens him in so doing. If she is not able to turn him on his side, he, before long, has one of his severe spells.

The condition is known as "trep-pnea" (the technical word for shortness of breath is "dyspnea") and for shortness of breath in the supine position is "orthopnea").

Ideas of Comfort Differ

There is a peculiarity among different people as to which position they find the most comfortable. In the case of the man just recited, he was comfortable when he was on his side. Some people, however, are uncomfortable on the side and comfortable on the back. A case in point is of a woman, 44 years old, with high blood pressure, who states that if she lies on the left side she feels a pressing on the apex of the heart, and that she gets "all stuffed up and can't breathe." She says that often in the middle of the night she wakes up lying on the left side with a funny, short cough, all choked up.

There is no explanation that anybody can give for these particular symptoms, and the variations are probably due to variations in the nature of the heart trouble itself. They certainly have no implications as to any particularly healthful position of a person who is in good health, and the last thing that anybody would suggest is that lying in any particular position induces heart disease.

Dr. Clendenning

This is pretty futile. Such observations as those made by Dr. Donald A. Laird, show that every human being moves every so often (on an average of about every 12 minutes) and in the course of the night, shifts into nearly every position.

The idea that any particular position is "hard on the heart", which is the usual explanation given, probably arises from the observations of people who have more or less heart disease.

An illustration is that of a patient who comes to the clinic with a moderate amount of chronic rheumatic heart disease. He is bothered mostly by attacks of shortness of breath in the night. He says he never has awakened in an attack without finding himself on his back and that he has never awakened on his back without being in the midst of one of these paroxysms. His wife volunteers the information that she has often seen him asleep on his back, pants today are eloquent speakers. Of even greater significance, their thoughts are as wise as their words.

Scioto Valley Grange Holds Halloween Party

Nearly 100 Present
For Tuesday's Program

Scioto Valley Grange entertained at a delightful Halloween party, Tuesday evening, in the grange hall. Seventy maskers and 25 visitors were present for the occasion.

A grand march opened the evening's festivities and the awarding of prizes for the prettiest and ugliest costumes followed.

Glenn Rader, Benford Miller and Mrs. Frank Jinks served as judges and the prize for the prettiest costume was received by Mrs. Herbert Swoyer and the prize for the ugliest by Miss Gladys Vause. Miss Helen McCord furnished the piano music for the march.

Mrs. Allyn Rathmell led in guessing who the maskers were.

The program opened with group singing of a Halloween song. Mrs. Ira Scythorn, lecturer of the grange, who was in charge of the program then divided the guests in four groups headed by Fred Barthelmas, Mrs. Frank Jinks, Mrs. Herbert Rathmell and Herbert Swoyer, and each group was responsible for one game during the evening. Mrs. Scythorn led the guests who were not masked in an appropriate song. Lunch was served by a committee comprised of Mrs. Harold Fisher, Mrs. Fred Barthelmas, Alfred Pierce, Roberta Cromley, and Pamah Warner.

Ralph Stevenson, master of the grange conducted a short business meeting at the conclusion of the evening. The decorations of the hall in keeping with the spirit of Halloween added greatly to the pleasure of the evening.

Bingo Party
The Pochontas lodge will sponsor a bingo party Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock in their lodge room. This is open to the public.

Yo-Yo Club
The members of the Yo-Yo club were entertained Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. C. O. Kerns, W. Union street. Mrs. John Kerns was assisting hostess.

More Fur Trims the New Coats

FUR AND MORE fur trims the newest models in fur coats that decorate our well dressed women or are glimpsed in smart shops.

Fur not only collars the new coats, but the garments fairly drip with soft, flattering pelts. Sleeves are made of it, borders the hems of some models or circles around the neck, down the two sides and around to the back. Or it is used in a tuxedo front or as a long stole, as in the coat shown.

This is a swaggar coat with the full-length stole in lynx. Another feature of the garment is the three-quarter length bell sleeves—very new this year.

The model is Joan Woodbury, film actress, who completes her costume with a flame-colored Oriental turban.

Small Fur Collars Youthful
It seems to be either a feast or a famine in the use of fur, and then again there is the fur-trimmed hat. Some hats are half and half fur and fabric. One has the front of mink, the back of pleated jersey. A sailor in brown velvet uses fur—nutria—on the brim. Moire caracul and mink are combined in another hat by a well-known milliner, and a black antelope Dutch cap has a soft crushed crown and mink trim.

A soft, fluffy pom-pom of fur is used on many of the winter hats in place of any other trimming, and is a chic method of decoration.

Marie Hamilton Honored At Eastern Star Confab

Miss Marie L. Hamilton, a teacher of special education classes in the Circleville schools, and worthy grand matron of the Ohio Eastern Star, presided at a formal dinner for grand officers, Monday evening at Hotel Cleveland. The dinner was preliminary to the state convention which opened at the Public Hall Monday night.

After ten years of lesser office holding and many more years of ordinary membership in which she had taken innumerable small routine parts, Miss Hamilton found herself at the peak, of a year as head of the 112,000 Eastern Stars of Ohio. She was granted a leave of absence by the Circleville Board of Education in order to fulfill the duties of the office. She has visited more than 100 chapters of Ohio's 500.

Miss Hamilton was highly complimented by the grand officers, Monday, on the work she has accomplished during the year as worthy grand matron. She presented each officer a nut scoop made from the fallen branches of the Logan Elm as a farewell gift. This dinner really marked Miss Hamilton's last appearance as a grand officer as she will complete her work at this convention.

Among the 21 seated at the dinner were P. R. Devore, of Columbus, worthy grand patron; Mrs. Bessie Boice, of Columbus, grand secretary and Mrs. Hazel Beach, of London, grand treasurer.

More than 3,000 registered Monday for the convention.

Miss Hamilton spoke Sunday over WHK tracing the history of the Order of the Eastern Star back 87 years to Robert Morris, who formed it to carry on aims of the Masons. In this period it has grown to 2,000,000 members and now needs $5,000,000 annually for needy members, she said.

"We pride ourselves," she said, "on being an order founded on religious principles. We do not expect to supplant the church. But we like to be thought of as a worthy supplement of it."

Arthur Smith, prompter; F. T. Bowne, make-up.

The music will be furnished by the Walnut school orchestra under the direction of Mary Ruth Tolbert.

COACH OF CHICAGO TEAM HAD CHANCE TO BECOME BUCK MENTOR

FORMER TULANE GRID TEACHER REFUSED OFFER

St. John Had Shaughnessey Second on List to Take Willaman's Job

OHIOANS STUDY PLAYS

Long Offensive Drill Held Tuesday Afternoon

COLUMBUS, Oct. 27 — (UP) — Scholarly Clark Shaughnessey spends many an unpleasant afternoon with the motley squad at his disposal at the University of Chicago, but it is doubtful if any cause the Maroon mentor deeper regret than those when he must sit and look across the field at the Ohio State bench, and he faces that task Saturday.

When Shaughnessey looks at the Buck squad and sees the gridders "three deep" at every position it must be impossible for him to suppress a sigh and mutter: "And they could have been mine."

True too, for had Shaughnessey so desired he could today be the head coach of the Bucks instead of gruff Francis A. Schmidt.

When "Sad Sam" Willaman was ousted as coach of the Bucks, Athletic Director L. W. St. John began a long search for a man who could satisfy the loud ravings of alumni and Columbus fans.

Possibilities Listed

After painstaking investigation St. John came up with a list of three candidates — his top choices for the job.

On the list were:

No. 1 — Dana Bible, then at Nebraska; No. 2, Clark Shaughnessey, then at Tulane; and No. 3, Nobel Kizer of Purdue.

The Buck athletic chieftain was balked in his effort to get any of these coaches and he then went down another list and finally settled upon Schmidt.

Even though he turned down the Ohio State job, Shaughnessey was not to remain long at Tulane. Personal reasons led to his leaving the Southern school, and he went to Chicago where a coach is provided with nothing but security and sympathy.

Shaughnessey has expressed himself as satisfied with his lot at Chicago, but nevertheless it's a safe bet he doesn't enjoy memories a game with Ohio State brings to him.

The Bucks were given a long offensive drill yesterday.

TIGER RESERVES DEFEATED 0-32 IN TUESDAY TILT

Cincinnati high school reserves went to Xenia, Tuesday afternoon, to play Xenia East, a Negro school, but ended up by playing a practice tilt with Central. The score was 32-0 in favor of the Xenia crew.

After arriving in Xenia, Coach Jack Landrum learned that the Negro school had abandoned football, so he arranged a practice tilt with the stronger school.

The Tigers started with Heffner and Don Jackson at ends, Russ Liston and Hays at tackle, Harden and C. Martin, Nelson at center, Moon at quarterback, Hill and Walters at the halves, and Hughes at fullback. Substitutions included Clifton, Brown, Orr, Zaenglein, Garner, and Beck.

Xenia Central has won six football games this year.

BLIND GOLFERS SCORES 79 LONDON (UP)—Captain Gerald Lowry, famous blind sportsman, returned a score of 79 in a game at Mersea Island (Essex) Golf club. The length of the course is 6,352 yards, and the bogey is 75. His valet placed the ball, told him where to stand and the distance of the ball from each green.

Some of the popular fall colors are plum, drake blue and moss green.

Booster Tickets Available for Greenfield Game

This is an appeal to all Circleville football lovers to buy a Booster ticket for Friday night's game with Greenfield. The tickets, available at Hamilton and Ryan's, from Stouge club members and members of the Improvement Association that made the football field lights possible, are selling for $1. all of which will be applied to the light debt. Persons not wishing to pay $1 may see the grid game with Greenfield for 50 cents. The lights have added much to the football field. The persons who put up their money to assure them should be recompensed, and the only way in which they can receive their money is for grid fans to buy the Booster tickets. Members of the association are planning a campaign, to be conducted Thursday, in an effort to sell more of the tickets. If you do not have a Booster ticket you are welcome at Friday's game, but if you do have a ticket you are doubly welcome.

FUTURE OF B.A.A. IN DOUBT AFTER WESLEYAN ACTS

By Tommy Devine
United Press Staff Correspondent
COLUMBUS, Oct. 27.—(UP)—The future of the Buckeye conference was more uncertain today than practically anytime since the compact little circuit was formed in 1925.

With the announced possibility that Ohio Wesleyan would withdraw from the conference at the semi-annual meeting here in December, the league faced not only the loss of a charter member, but also the Buckeye's most diligent supporter in George Gauthier, athletic director of the Bishops.

Ohio Wesleyan contemplates withdrawal from the Buckeye for the same reason that two other charter members dropped their affiliation— inability to compete on an even basis in football.

Denison dropped from the conference in 1932 after four miserable gridiron campaigns. Over that stretch Denison played 17 football games within the Buckeye. Sixteen of the games were lost and the other tied.

After the 1933 football season Wittenberg quit because of grid reverses also. During its last two seasons in the conference, Wittenberg won one out of 10 league games.

Wesleyan now is in the midst of its second successive losing campaign. In 1936 the Bishops finished with one victory, three defeats and one tie. They have lost their only two league starts this season.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

DROPPING THE BIDDING
IT TAKES a lot of courage sometimes to drop the bidding when your partner has warned you about a misfit. Such action is pointed to quite strongly, however, if your partner rebids his own suit twice in response to calls of two other suits by you. This can be so even if your partner made the original bid, as it may have been based on nothing but one pretty good suit with a secondary honor or two on the side which will not fit your combinations.

at 5-Clubs, and none of these were successful in making their contracts.

The plus score on the North-South holdings was where the bidding started with 1-Spade by South, 2-Clubs by North, 2-Spades by South, 3-Hearts by North and 3-Spades by South. The North player, even though void in his partner's suit, realized that they held misfits and any further bidding on his part would probably get his side into trouble. He therefore decided to let 3-Spades stand, figuring that his partner's suit was no doubt fairly solid. Even though West held five spades against South, the contract was made with the loss of two diamonds, one club and one trump trick.

COUNCIL SEEKS FUNDS NECESSARY TO START WORK ON DISPOSAL PLANT

BANKS, BONDING FIRMS ASKED TO TAKE UP NOTES

Container Corporation Lets City Have Site on Lease For 99 Years

DOLLAR ANNUAL RENTAL

Money Appropriated For Test Boring

Council's finance committee and Carl C. Leist, solicitor, were authorized by councilmen Tuesday evening to issue $60,000 worth of notes in anticipation of a bond issue for the disposal plant project.

The issuance of notes will be used for the city's share of the project. Circleville voters approved a $75,000 bond issue for the disposal plant program. Some time ago council issued $15,000 worth of notes to take care of preliminary expenses of the project. These notes were delivered to Circleville's national banks Tuesday. Each bank took $5,000 worth of the notes.

Circleville banks and various bonding firms will be asked to bid on the $60,000 note issue. Mr. Leist explained to councilmen that they had two courses to follow in obtaining funds for the project, one was to issue bonds, the other to issue notes in anticipation of the bond issue. He believed funds would be available sooner through the note issue.

$61,363 Allotted

The Public Works Administration has allotted $61,363 to the city for the government's share of the disposal plant program. Under terms of this allocation the city has 14 weeks from the date of the offer, Sept. 30, to start work on the project.

Mr. Leist told council he had talked with a Container Corporation official in Chicago, Tuesday, and was informed the necessary papers for a site on the company's land would be in the mail Wednesday. He said the company would furnish the necessary land for a site under a 99-year lease at $1 a year. Treatment of the company's waste is being considered in plans for the city plant.

E. S. Neuding, councilman, told members that a representative of a conservation organization had been in Circleville, and Mr. Neuding said he understood the city might face some damage action unless it "cleaned up" when the Columbus disposal plant was placed in operation. Numerous pollution suits have been filed against the city of Columbus.

An ordinance appropriating funds for further steps in the project was passed under suspension of rules. It authorized the service director to direct Floyd G. Browne, sanitary engineer on the project, to have specifications of the plant printed at a cost not to exceed $160. These specifications would be submitted to contractors. It provided also that test borings be made on the site of the plant at a cost not to exceed $350.

Another ordinance was passed under suspension of rules making a transfer of funds in connection with the project. Council passed an ordinance on Sept. 30 appropriating $1,100 from the general fund to pay Mr. Browne for services. Since the $15,000 worth of bonds have been issued an ordinance was passed to appropriate $1,100 from the disposal plant fund back to the city's general fund.

Mr. Brown is preparing the plant plans at the present time. They will be submitted to council, the state board of health and P. W. A. for approval when completed.

PROCESSING TAX TO BE REVIVED TO DEFRAY COST

Committee Headed By Jones Of Texas Studying Needed Statute

to stabilize prices.

5. Surplus control provisions.

6. Steps to protect the consumer from excessive prices.

Despite invalidation of processing taxes by the supreme court, Jones said that "we can work something out" along constitutional lines. Other members of the house committee believe that revival of the processing taxes might prove risky from a constitutional standpoint.

Costs to Be Defrayed

President Roosevelt was warned that additional costs of the farm program must be defrayed by new taxes so as not to unbalance the budget.

Special treatment of corn, wheat, cotton, tobacco and rice in surplus control and marketing features will be included in the bill, Jones said.

Some sources doubted that cotton would be included in the ever-normal-granary provisions because there is little likelihood of a shortage since there has been a carry-over annually during the past 40 years.

Under Jones' plan, base acreages for principal commodities would be: cotton 45,500,000; wheat other than white 63,000,000; white wheat 4,400,000; field corn 102,000,000; rice 925,000; flue cured tobacco 1,080,000; Maryland tobacco, 39,000; burley tobacco 525,000; other tobacco 480,000.

Howard Hughes' Mystery Plane

HOWARD HUGHES, millionaire holder of air speed records, has had this $100,000 twin-engine Sikorsky plane built for him. Its sixteen seats have been removed and replaced with gasoline tanks. He has received permission to fly in foreign countries, and many believe he will try to fly around the world in it. All Hughes would say was "we're experimenting."

JOHN MONTAGUE GIVEN FREEDOM

en years ago he was one of the four men who robbed Kin Hana's roadhouse.

Montague seemed a hero to everyone in Elizabethtown with the exception of District Attorney McDonald, who prosecuted him, and County Judge Harry E. Owen who presided at his trial. Judge Owen made his feelings plain when the jury announced the verdict.

"I am sorry to say that your verdict is not in accordance with what I think you should have rendered, but that is up to you, not me."

Released From Bond

James Noonan, Montague's lawyer, moved then that Montague be released from the $25,000 bond under which he had been at liberty. Curly, Owen granted the motion. Then Noonan, the lawyer who once defended the gangster, Dutch Schultz, turned to the jury:

"I thank you, I thank you in behalf of Laverne Moore (Montague's real name; he changed it at the beginning of the seven year period during which he was wanted on the robbery charge) and now he will thank you for himself."

Montague arose and began:

"Gentlemen of the jury . . . He got no further. Judge Owen's face had been clouding. He rapped angrily on the bench with his gavel, cried:

"Wait a minute! This is no show."

Montague sat down, murmuring:

"I'm sorry, your honor."

Owen adjourned court and it seemed that everyone in the packed courtroom swarmed around the muscular, pudgy Montague, pounding his shoulders, wringing his hand. He was lifted to willing insane with fear, who had tried to storm the barriers.

Just beyond the British lines, in the western suburbs, Japanese airplanes in great fleets mercilessly bombed and machine gunned crowds of disordered Chinese soldiers and refugees. Some bombs dropped inside the British defense lines, drawn up for this emergency just beyond the international settlement boundary.

A British machine gunner fired a burst from his gun at one of these planes as it roared down toward his outpost, and it was established with almost complete certainty that he had brought down the plane.

One British infantryman was wounded in the cheek by a stray rifle bullet.

Italian Killed

An Italian grenadier was killed at his post in the Italian defense sector by a 50 calibre anti-aircraft bullet. He died, shot through the left breast, as he arrived at the United States marine field hospital.

Briefly, the situation as this dispatch was written, was that the Japanese had fought their way into Shanghai proper. They had taken the Chapei-North railroad station area in the northern part of the city. They surrounded on three sides some thousands of Chinese rear guards. On the fourth side was Soochow creek, and on the other side of the creek were the American marines.

The main Chinese army, abandoning the Kiangwan suburb northeast of the city and the Chapei-North station sector in the city were retreating in orderly manner to their new line, which starts just west of the city and runs northward from the Chungshang road to the Shanghai-Nanking railroad, through Chenju and on to Nanzhang, Kwanfu and Luho, up near the Yangtze river. This is the Chiang Kai-Shek line of steel, concrete and barbed wire fortifications to which the Chinese long ago decided to retire when the Japanese "big push" made it suicidal to remain on their old front.

The Japanese were driving from the north toward Nanzhang and Chenju, hoping that the momentum of their drive would make it impossible for the Chinese to consolidate for a stand. It was still uncertain whether the Japanese would do this, and thus isolate the Chinese entirely from Shanghai proper.

Dawn Brings Terror

This day of terror started when Japanese planes went up at dawn—30 in one fleet, 12 in another—to bomb the Chinese lines. Soon afterward every Japanese gun within range was turned on the Chapei-North railroad station area.

During the night, under cover of the dark, the Chinese were pouring back from their salient in the Kiangwan suburb, and the Japanese planes ripped through the crowded, pushing lines of troops with their bombs and bullets.

At 6 a. m. the Japanese infantry went over the top in the streets of Shanghai, from the navy lines east of the railroad station.

Shortly before 7 a. m. the Japanese stormed and took the administration building of the Shanghai-Nanking railroad, adjoining the north station. They hoisted the rising sun flag over it.
